Chitwan National Park

Chitwan National Park, which translates to “heart of the jungle”, was the very first of Nepal’s national parks, established in 1973. The World Heritage-listed reserve protects over 93 000 hectares (230 000 acres) of forests, marshland and rippling grassland, and is home to many endangered animals including the one-horned rhino, royal Bengal tiger, gharial crocodile and fresh water gangetic dolphin. You’ll also find a thriving population of various types of deer and monkeys, with potential sightings of wild boar, sloth bear and leopard. Additionally, the park boasts 565 bird species. Enjoy an array of wildlife activities such as an elephant back safari (for a chance of getting up close to Rhinos), a boat trip on the Rapti river, game drives, and jungle walks.

Taj Meghauri Serai

Set within Chitwan National Park on the banks of the River Rapti is the new Taj Meghauri Serai Safari Lodge. There are 16 standalone luxury villas, 12 hotel-style rooms, and one Presidential Suite, all offering fine touches with contemporary design and creating a calming sanctuary in the heart of the wilderness. The lodge’s public areas include a main lounge with a bar and central fireplace; an infinity swimming pool with a riverview deck for dining and wildlife viewing; and a themed dining venue recreating the ambiance of a traditional Tharu village. Kanha National Park

Kanha National Park is one of India's largest reserves, covering 194 500ha (485 000 acres) of pristine Indian wilderness. Lush sal and bamboo forests are interspersed with vast grassy meadows known as maidans, while the Banjaar River, which forms the park's southwestern border, provides a steady water source for the abundant wildlife. Apart from the majestic Bengal tiger, the central parklands are home to approximately 22 mammal species, including the jackal, wild pig, black buck, striped hyena, leopard, mouse deer, chinkara, ant-eating pangolin and three-striped palm squirrel. Kanha also supports a thriving population of the highly endangered barasingha, or swamp deer.

The contemporary suites feature bamboo floors, a canvas roof and walls, and glass doors that lead out onto a veranda overlooking the river. Each camp boasts its own comfortable guest sitting area with a spacious open-air dining area, interpretive library, swimming pool, and safari shop. Banjaar Tola Tented Camp Website
